First-instead of condemning the sa-loonkeeper, condemn his patrons. Second-instead of licensing the sa-loonkeeper as now, license his patrons. The total revenue can be made about the same and we will at once put the salcon on a higher plane by compelling all drinkers to have a drinker's license. The treating evil will disappear, as will also the back door, the painted door, and the screens now used for the protection of the hypocrite. No one will be dealso the back door, the painted door, and the screens now used for the protection of the hypocrits. No one will be deprived of his liberties to drink, and drunkenness, drunken disturbances, neglect of homes, &c., will all disappear when known they will cause a revocation of the drinker's license. Proper safe-guards can be thrown around the original issuing of this personal license to drink and its renewal made dependent upon the action and conduct of the holder. Thousands upon thousands of men and women who now patronize the salons would at the present be ashamed to apply for a drinker's license. The evil of minors drinking would also disappear. Don't deprive men and women of their liberties to drink, but compel them to get a drinker's license and we will have made a long stride in the right direction.

the State.

Henry G. Wasson, who was made chairman of the Republican State Committee of Pennsylvanis, after Thill Flinn had assumed control in that State, came to Washington year terday with a proposition in regard to the Republican electors in that State.

The electors are Roosevelt men, and if they insist on voting for the colonel, Taft Republicans in the State will upractically be disfranchised unless a separate set of electors is put in the indid by Taft. Wasson proposed that the present electors be named on both to the Taft and Roosevelt tickets, with dhe understanding that the randidates receiving the majority of votes of Pennsylvania should receive the votes if of the electors in the electoral college. The Taft men are inclined to regard in this proposition suspiciously, and nothing will be done in relation to it until ethe situation in regard to electors in Fennsylvania and in other States has upen the reductions in the straight of their straight of the straight on the regard to electors in Fennsylvania and in other States has upen the reductions of the straight of the straight
